

Sheila Wildeman

Sheila Wildeman, BA (Toronto), MA (Columbia), LLB (Dalhousie), LLM (Toronto) is an Assistant Professor at Dalhousie University Schulich School of Law, where she teaches administrative law and public law. Her research is mainly concentrated in mental health law, with a focus on the assessment of capacity to make psychiatric treatment decisions. Sheila is also involved in research examining adult protection laws and practices in the Maritime provinces, and the state of provincial laws on substitute decision-making about research participation.